

Justin Rabindra

I was born in Tuticorin in Tamil Nadu and grew up in Malaysia and then in Madras and after completing my schooling and graduation from Madras University I moved to Delhi. I worked in advertising for over 30 years and then quit it all and became a professional photographer in 2012. Photography had been a hobby and a serious interest for several years even when I was employed.

Most of my work involves shooting food and interiors for hotels; I also shoot for travel magazines and do portrait photography of leaders for corporate websites. My work can be seen at www.justinrabindra.com.

I travel quite extensively, a love that I discovered when I was employed when I used to travel on business. I have travelled to about 45 countries, mostly in Europe, and my camera is my constant companion of course.

I love to play the guitar and sing - pop, rock, country and gospel songs. I'm sing tenor with a choir in Delhi. Earlier this year we traveled to the UK and performed at concerts at Edinburgh, Belfast and London.

I've written and published a book of crime stories on Kindle titled 'When You Love A Beautiful Woman: And Other Crime Stories.'

I live in New Delhi with my wife and I have a married daughter who lives in Mangalore. Oh yeah, I have an adorable granddaughter who turns 1 in September 2018.
